Honorong, July-27th-1871-

Accompand to the last accounts the excitement at Canton consequent upon the rumours. concerning the distribution of the mysterious white medicine has subsided; and affairs are again considered likely to go on quietly. The danger which was threatened being now over, many as is too frequently the case, are disposed to consider that it never had any existence and to blame H.B.M. Acting Consul for having paid more attention than necessary to what turn out to be idle rumours. Experience, however, does not warrant this view of the matter. However absurd Chinese rumours may be, however little effect they may ultimately produce, nobody responsible for the safety of his countrymen and for the maintenance of order, can afford to give no heed to them. They may mean nothing or they may mean everything. A breath may put out the spark of discontent, but a breath may also cause it at any moment to burst in a we are aware that it is completely beyond our was held by Mr. Lister yesterday, when a verpower to ascertain whether a given rumous diet was returned as follows:-" Accidentally was to have proved without perjury. It was of the business, and he looked to them for cash; with regard to which letters had been stopped, was to have proved without perjury. It was of the business, and he looked to them for cash; with regard to which letters had been stopped. or excitement comes within the one category' or within the other. What is also of great importance, we have too much reason to were drowned in certainly not more than? or 8 was coming there to contradict, that onthe in Canton and Macao, and carried on with enquired into. believe that the Chinese officials themselves, even when willing to act with perfect · bona fides, can be certain when it is necessary for them to adopt severe measures to put down a threatened rising, or that they will be able to apply the required remedies when but had the men formed a line, they must have they are desirous to do so. Under such circumstances, upon what can we and ought we to rely? Should we follow the system adopted by the Chinese themselves of hoping for the best, and carefully shutting our eyes to unpleasant realities, while everything indicates that we should be up and doing; should we rely upon a masterly mactivity or should we adopt such simple measures of precaution as are within our power, and be prepared for any daty to tell his master. Instead of that, event that may arise? It is urged in favour ran away with his fellow-servant, and by his of the former course that it is undesirable to make any display of force, as this is calculated to irritate the officials, and by being an in. dication that we fear an outbreak, is likely on that very account to bring one about. But as to the irritation we may safely adopt Lord PALMEBETON's dictum, that it is an abuse of terms to say that when you employ means to prevent danger you are provoking that danger and irritating the party against whom the precautions may be taken. If no animosity exists, the precautions can have no effect but inspiring confidence in the party in whose favour they are made; if, on the other hand, there be a disposition to attack, that disposition is sure to be lessened in proportion as the chances of success are diminished. Thus, if the Mandarins to whose co-operation we have a right to look, are willing to exert their power stowards our protection, their ability to do so effectually will not be lessened, but increased, by the fact that the unfriendly classes are made aware by a timely demonstration of readiness for action, that their dis- give the Court 24 hours' notice. regarding the commands of their officials will be attended with serious results to themselves. If inclined to defy the Mandarins, as is too frequently the case, they will be brought to reason when they find a practical demonstration that such deliance of authority may lead to serious consequences to themselves and their fellow citizens: while as respects Mandarins, if they are disposed to delay taking vigorous action in the hope that any given excitement will blow over, it is demonstrated by lengthened experience that a timely indication to them of the effects which will be brought about by their inaction is the best possible means of rousing them from their lethargy. To take steps for our own protection is no act of hostility towards the respectable Chinese or the officials, who if they lack the moral courage to put down disturbances, are certainly likely to suffer very severely if an outbreak actually occur. The action is hostile only to those who are disposed to act with hostility and against the interests both of China and of foreign nations. It is hostile to the rowdies

of their officials. For these reasons we consider that Mr. Acting Consul HUGHES and the LIEUT.-GOVERNOR of this Colony deserve thanks and commendation for the promptitude with which they have met the exigences of the crisis which recently threatened, and which it may now be hoped is passed. It is easy, as some do, to say there was nothing in it; but two things are undeniable. There was just as much in it as in the prelude to the Tiontsin. Massacre, as far as we could see in either case; and there is the best reason to believe that a very moderate display of force would have been sufficient to avert the latter event. It is at the least equally probable that the arrival of the Thisde and the knowledge that preparations were being made in Hongkong dissipated the excitement, as that, supposing of Justice were paramount. And if the that there was not nothing had been done, the excitement would have passed over of itself. We are not called upon to run such a risk as we should incur by neglecting to put ourselves in an attitude, this till after the criminal proceedings. of defence. If ordinary precautions taken for our protection should in any given case Abdool Moussa only. have the effect, as it is argued they may of causing an outbreak, this would only be a proof of the dangerous state of affairs existing, and the extreme likelihood of a dis. turbance arising before very long even if we ed Hadji. refrained from any action. circumstances of the recent affair into account, there was no evidence of any sufficiently vigorous action on their part; and secing the ill-feeling daily increasing, it would have been a dereliction of duty on the part of the acting Consul to allow affairs to take clone. Now he had a word to say about public Mousse, Moor Mahomed Camisa and Sheik their course on the chance of the mob altering their minds. Had he done so, it is by no means impossible that a serious outbreak would have occurred, and immediately after proclamation would have been duly issued by the Chinese officials warning the people not to do what they had just accomplished.

In view of the proceedings which took place vesterday in the Supreme Court, it is not considered desirable to postpone the publication of the detailed report of the conspiracy ease heard before Mr. May at the Police Court, which is accordingly given farther on.

A correspondent, who is a good authority opon the question, referring to the remarks made in yesterday's leader on the subject of seeret associations, states that a very respectable Obinaman informed him that a secret association has been going on for the last three years n this Colony, baving for its object the overthrow of the present Dynasty, and that it already numbers no less than ten thousand.

It was often the case (said Buller, J.) that oriminal prosecutions were instituted to sift out facts, and this was an unreasonable waste of the time of the Court. The affidavis here proved that it was the object in this instance to sift out facts. The case cited showed that if the criminal information was granted the civil case must be abandoned. It is, only another, illustration of the insuperable difficulty which the Democrate have to face -the difficulty, that is, of framing b police which would be at once acceptable to the Nort and popular to the South. Mr. John Quincy Adams understands the temper of the North and Jefferson Davis understands equally well Chun Allo, Chun Acheong, boatmon, Cheong the temper of the South. If only he compromoyal buil bloow holds begived bed bad layour charged on the 24th inst. with stealing twoling in both sections of the country! But there is worshipped as a hero. Why? Merely because he represents the treasonable plans of 61. Intelligent men in the South know that he is a blockhead. But they still believe in the principle of which Davis is a sort of embodiment. They like to hear him mumble promises of a revival of secession.

The Southern Democrate would be only too charmed to have him as their candidate for the ON New YORK— Presidency next year. And, in truth, if the Private, 5 months sight people mean to elect a Democrat at all, they On Bombay.—Bank, 3 days' sight 227) may as well take Jefferson Davie while they are | On Calourra. -Bank, 3 days sight 2275 about it—after getting him freed from political On Shanghal.—disabilities, in accordance with the advice given by several Republican journals. After that, let us go a step forther and put him in General Grant's Hongkong Bank Shares, New-46 per conplace. If we are determined to have another rebellion on our hands, we may as well go the shortest way to work about it. That, at least, seems to be the opinion of some Republicans as well as Democrats.

"GUILTY WITH EXTENUATING OIRCUMSTANCES."

It is certainly desirable, remarks the Observer, that a jury should bave the power of recircumstances." A case has recently occurred in which two gentlemen were indicted for having conspired together to commit a felony The piroumstances of the case were such as to excite the very strongest prepossession in faup very vigorously in their behalf, and the jury almost immediately returned a verdict of hot guilty (which was received with open applause in court), and coupled with it a censure, in which the prosecution had more or less, endeawoured to entrap the prisoners into the crime with which they were churged. Those who have read the trial cannot but approve of the effect given, which was of course the immediste liberation of the gentlemen accused. But at the same time it is open to great doubt whether in many similar cases at least, if not in this, what has been really wanted has not boon a verdict of "guilty with extenuating circumstances," and with it an absolutely nominal punishment. As it is, juries are often obliged, in the strictest interests of justice, to postpone the letter of the criminal law to the dictates of common sense, and to return, more or less in the teeth of the evidence, a verdict of not guilty.

CHINESE GOOD FAITH.

(New York Times,)

There is equal propriety and justice in the general denunciation, which has found voice at the religious meetings held here and elsewhere during the past few days, with regard to the reactionary movement in China. Naturully, there is small satisfaction in seeing mission field, which has now for fifty years been cultivated at vast expense of funds and faith, addenly shut against further attempts at tillage. And, Christianity aside, the spirit of progress and civilisation looks on with dismay to find that the sanguine hopes founded on the Burlingame Embassy and its doings are so rudely dispelled at a moment's notice." But, without discussing the questions which the missionary and the social reformer have to consider in this matter, we may fitly inquire what action our Government has taken or purposes to take under circumstances which involve as bold a violation of treaty stipulations as the history of diplomatio relations records.

The recent Imperial decree abolishes schools established for the instruction of females, reztricts teaching to Government rules and regulations, probibits the promulgation of any doctrines which do not agree with those of Confucius, and transfers the missionaries from

of foreigners a few months ago is the natural result of the repudiation of those principles of reform which the world welcomed only a short time ago. When, in 1858, the United States executed a treaty with Ohina, that document contained a provision that "any person, whether citizen of the United States or Chinese convert, should be allowed, without persecution or molestation, peaceably to teach and practice the principles of Christianity." The Burlingame Treaty. made ten years later, emphasized these very points, and in its fourth article contained an agreement that the people of either nation, when in either country, should enjoy perfect religious liberty, and be exempt from persecution on account of their faith and worship. So. far as our country is concorned this treaty has been escredly observed, as witness the josshouses and entire freedom of religious ritual allowed the "Heathen Chines" wherever cares to settle in America. On other hand, the conduct Imperial Government has not been in the line of decent respect for our rights, and the rights tions. This recent proclamation is, in fact, an from this date. insult to the United States which cannot safely be overlooked, and, whether we will or not, we Hongkong and China, are compelled to take up the matter in defence of our missionaries and their converts. When our present minister, Mr. Low, sailed for China, he received instructions from the State Department which indicate a determination on date. the part of the United States to insist upon the faithful fulfilment of the Treaty in its entirety. Even within the past year; as matters of provocation have been reported, Secretary Fish has directed Minister Low to. inform the Celestial authorities," that any violation of the rights of our citizens, and any flagrant violation of treaty stipulations of other Powers, may cause a change of the traditiona policy of the United States in their intercourse with China." This certainly was a very courteously-world threat. And now that the "violations" have occurred, under aggravating circumstances, too, the country awaits with some impatience and suriety the intimation of a de- 81st December last cided line of policy on the part of our Govern-

Love of Children. (Salu day Review.) Lord Palmerston projuced much scandal and a good deal of amusement by promulgating the ber, or to keep the cath to which be had sworn. Policies issued for long or short periods at heretical theory that all people are born good. He waited till the revolution was successful, current rates. Without discussing the theological bearings of and then went out to see what was going on. this doctrine, we may at least say that it will hardly bear inspection from a scientific point Rotel de Ville, and take a chief part in the new of view. Rudimentary vices are as conspicuous Government, he did so, taking, as we have said, in little children as rudimentary virtues. Let mo concern for the safety of the Empress or of anybor observe candidly a child of two or Paris. If we must judge General Trochu by three years old. There is scurcely any defect his own account of his conduct on the 4th Sepwhich it would not be possible for an unpreindiced person to discover. Such a child may we should be very sorry to express in plain be benevolent, courageous, and conscientions language." according to its little lights. But certainly it is also very apt to be sensual, selfish, and spiteful, and to show thefe qualities with a frankness which generally disappears in later life. "It is greedy without blushing; it will approprinte the belongings of its little brothers and sistors with the utmost coolness; and it will tell lies as soon as it begins to discover what is the use of language. Painters generally please themselves by portraying infant enints and martyre; but, if they were anxious to indulge in realistic representations, they would have no trouble in finding models for infant Judanes. Cains, or Sapphiras. We generally excuse the misdeeds on the ground that our infant darlings know no better; but, if we insisted upon strict impartiality, the same argument would take all the merit out of their virtues. Chil dren, indeed, sometimes develop the failings of an advanced civilisation with a prococity which is rather amusing. Thackeray, than whom nobody was a greater lover of children, some where relates at instructive anecdote. Half-a dozen children are playing with a puppy, and manufacturing mud-pies. To them enters a companion, and exclaims, "Mary Jane, your sister has found a penny!" Straightway the puppy is put down as if it were so much dross, the mud-pies are abandoned, and the little band of courtiers gathers round the infant millionaire and accompanies her to the applestall. Were not these infants in course of preparation-if only the Futes were propitious -to appear in some future Book of Snobs! In spite of all which, we may safely return to the proposition that, whatever logical justification may or may not be discovered, a love of small children is a very great test of a really amiable character. People who confess to a certain sympathy with Herod may produce a considerable body of argument in defence of their infanticidal propensities; but we cannot admit that they are in the right of the question. doctrine, in fact, which lies at the base of their reasoning may be easily met. We have, in fact; been arguing on the hypothesis that we ought to love the most virtuous people the best. If that theory be admitted without qualification, it would be very hard to make out a case on bahalf of infants. We need not, however, look twice to discover the fallacy of the argument. It was by assuming the truth of this proposition that certain philosophers of the last century discovered that the family affections ought to be put down as anti-social. Why, they inquired, should we love our brother merely because he happens to be the son of our father and mother, though he may be an unmitigated scamp? The consequences of admitting this doctrine are obvious. We should all prefer the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Prime Minister, and the Lord Chancellor, who, as need bardly be aroued, must be the most perfect specimens of humanity extant, to any of our own relations. No family could hold together if a father were always more occupied with the prosperity of those officials than with the welfare of his children. The parental instinct, which in its unattached form is the basis of a love of children in general, is to be encouraged. condition of society. A philoprogenitive race will, on the whole, bring up the best generation of successors, and philoprogenitiveness implies that general taste for all infants which to bachelors and cynical persons generally sometimes appears decidedly anomalous. Admitting the propriety of the feeling as society is at present constituted, perhaps we may be allowed an occasional passing regret that boys are not differently managed. Mr. Darwin speculates upon the consequences which would enplan of beehives. In that case, he thinks it probable that fratricide would be considered as a virtue. When such Utopian theories are under discussion, we may ask whether it would openly and directly avowed limits; and genenot have been as well if the dreams of these rally to pave the way to such a state of sifairs philosophers had been carried out, and each and opinion that when another than the now nation provided with a common nursery. When reigning Sovereign came to be dealt with, a one looks upon a baby in a purely philosophical spirit; when one considers the very minute inamicably settled abdication-could be effected. dications of reasoning faculty of which it is capable; when one preceeds to remark the ecs vances in this direction, all will be well. We have no desire to shock pressic persons without necessity, and we therefore freely avow. as our profound and immovable opinion, that, as things are at present constituted and we can see no reason whatever for supposing that any material change is likely to take place within any conceivable period-mothers ongot to love their children. Indeed, we go further; we admit that a man is the better in proportion as he retains cortain feminine instincts and has something of his mother in his character; and, that being so, we will venture to argue that a love of children is generally a harmless and even a laudable instinct. Carried to excess, it is perhaps rather inconsistent with patriotism and we observe that universal philanthropists -who, of course, are the best of men -are apt to be slightly callons upon this point. But for the mass of mankind we have no hesitation in admitting that those who love shildren the most must be reckened amongst the most exemplary of the species,

The Unity of Germany. The Times says: This day is but the beginning of a great work. Many conturies have East, with the prepared for it; many centuries will be required for its completion. The longer the period, the grander the opening spool. Germany will not he built in a day; but the day of its foundation will ever brighten in story. It is idle to anticipate the nature of the fluid Unity or the processes by which it is to be attained. Our own country presents one model; the United States another; France another still; all show that Union has its difficulties, and that a large amount Caloutta, Bombay, Yokohama, Hongkong and of submission and forbearance is as necessary to Shanghai the maintenance of a popular sovereignty as of a despetic throne. The nationa cannot but look on, and various thoughts will present themselves. The second Empire, with all its faults, did wondera for France. Germany may be wise enough to bear prosperity better. She basit in her power, for just now all the opportunities that man can have or make are lavished upon her. Of Fourse she has to beware of the pride of conquest and the insolence of the fortunate. It is not her soldiers who will lead her in this evi path. But Germany will have plenty to tel ber that she must be always marching could trophies and banners, jubilation and applause. as she does to-day by her Via Suora, Unter den Linden. She is wise enough to know that she cannot be always doing this. The holyday over, she will have to work out her great task of Unity soberly, quietly, and, above all, inoffensively."

The Standard states :- "As explained by rimself, General Trochu'a conduct upon the 4th of September appears to have been one of mas. is terly inactivity. We know now with how much difficulty the Empress escaped from Paris-we must use the word escaped, because the mob-the same mob which made the revolution of the 18th of March - was ready to commit any crime, and the new Government left her to resist or evade it. And yet General Trochu calle prepared to grant Insurances as follows :-himself a patriot and an honourable man, He had given the Empress the most solemn pledges that he would protect her in the event of an attempt at revolution. Upon his own showing he did not even move a hand to help Invited by M. Jules Favre to proceed to the Policies issued for sums not exceeding £5,000 tamber, we must form an opinion of him which

English Republicanism. That among those whose political cry is now Republicanism, there are some who have wrong and foolish ideas upon the subject-who think that under a Republic all things are necessarily purs, and every man sure of constant work and MANCHESTER FIRE ASSURANCE COMa comfortable living-that there are English Republicans holding such ideas as these, no candid person having a knowledge of the opinions existing among the working classes will for THE Undersigned have been appointed Other dwelling Houses, used strict. a moment attempt to deny. It is equally true, too, that the weekly newspaper which in the chief "organ" of Republicanism is ofter blatant and scurrilous, and habitually shows even a greater disregard than newspapers generally for the courtesy that should characterise honest political discussion. In short, English Republicanism, while having its good points, has also its blots, of which these are the chief. But they are only its blots: they do not, as many people suppose, constitute the thing itself. Among the working classes Republicanism has superseded Radicalism. Those who form the bulk of the Republicane do not expect impossibilities from a Republic, and are not so foolish as to hold levelling doctrines, while the better educated among them, even when agreeing with the argaments of the newspaper referred to, deplore and condemn its bad taste—not only as bad taste, but also as being an injury to the cause of Republicanism, since there can be little doubt that the coarse personality, violent invective, and bombastic tone of Republican journals and orators hitherto, have been instrumental in causing the higher class of Republican writers and thinkers to hold alor from any movements for practical organisation. Even with all its present imperfections on its bead, however, English Republicanism is not a thing to be contemptuously "daft aside." the contrary, any one acquainted with the real facts of the case, and at all skilled in reading the signs of the times, will understand that it ie a thing that it will be dangerous to treat with either real or affected contempt. In so far as Republicanism means Utilitarianism in Government, the spirit of the age in this country tends towards it. In time it must become the prodominating opinion practically, even if not nominally. Any danger to the State that there may be in it would lie in its being goaded into premature attempts to assert its suprema-It has great thinkers it its ranks, and hosts willing to serve its principles disinterestedly; but as yet it has not statesmen capable of carrying on the practical work of Government, and until it has them it would be a disaster for it as well au for the nation and not exceed. 3 " do. the most essential of all instincts to a healthy at large if by any soup or fluke it were able to ing....... seize the reins of power.
